

PART I:

1. WHO? [People who have exhibited a combination of problem-solving ability and the resilience necessary to overcome tragedy or major setbacks, be it the death of a parent or a business failure], often make great leaders.
2. ...because of their experience and empathy (bad experiences in the past → brings experience and empathy).

PART II:

--3-- you have a 24 percent likelihood to inherit a predisposition to do so as well

--1--- according to a study of twins published in the September 2012 issue of The Leadership Quarterly

--4-- indicating that being the offspring of leaders may give you an edge

--2--- if your biological parents held leadership positions

According to a study of twins published in the September 2012 issue of The Leadership Quarterly, if your biological parents held leadership positions, you have a 24 percent likelihood to inherit a predisposition to do so as well, indicating that being the offspring of leaders may give you an edge. (This is the original sentence)

2 4 3 1 is also possible (but a bit awkward).

PART III:

Some suggestions:

Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players after they came from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 and [they] knocked out the hosts in the process.

Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players after they came from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 - knocking out the hosts in the process.

Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players because/for/since/now that they came from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 and [they]knocked out the hosts in the process.

Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players because/for/since/now that they came from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 - knocking out the hosts in the process.

(Note: Other complex sentences are also possible when the order of the sentences are changed. Examples:

After they came from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 and [they]] knocked out the hosts in the process, Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players.

After they came from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 - knocking out the hosts in the process, Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players.

After coming from behind to beat Switzerland 2-1 (and)/ - knocking out the hosts in the process, Turkey coach Fatih Terim heaped praise on his players.)